

21soul e-course prospectus 2014

unpsychology

The psychology we have been sold has sold us out.

We've been led down two paths - both leading to dead-ends.

First, a clinical path of disorders, syndromes and treatment plans.

Second, a 'self-help' path of spirit, enlightenment, positive thinking and laws of attraction.

Neither lead us to where we need to be, nor help us tell the stories we need to tell, nor help us lead the lives we need to live in these troubled times.

Unpsychology is about challenging the assumptions that civilise us; going beyond the psychological boundaries that have been set for us, that narrow us down to a socialised self that fails to see beyond the enclosures.

The rich, deep and perilous soul and the wild ecology of mind, that emerges from the earth we evolved to live upon, have been lost in the fire.

Unpsychology is a new integration, a furnace in which new souls can be forged and burnished.
It is for soul activists; soul leaders; soul artists and soul makers.

twenty one soul

Steve Thorp trained and worked as a teacher, counsellor and psychotherapist. He now holds deep soul conversations with individuals, couples and groups to support their soul-making journeys. He developed 21soul as a new integration of psychology and life practice for turbulent times.

What is the programme about?

21soul is a new learning and development project aimed at people who are interested in creative soul-making in these challenging times. It is for soul activists, soul leaders, soul artists and soul makers.

It is a programme aimed at supporting deep psychological development, integral life practice, ecological activism and creativity.

21soul stands for Twenty First Century Soul - the force and the energy that we must live with and live through in this fast-moving century. We're facing big changes and unprecedented challenges to our ecological wellbeing, our relationships with each other and our coexistence with the Earth itself.

It is in this context that 21soul has been devised as a space in which people can come to learn, clear their heads and have good conversations before turning (if they choose) back into the hurry and bustle of history again - or taking another direction entirely!

What makes 21soul different?

At root, our culture has it wrong about what makes us happy and unhappy. 21soul is about starting to redress the balance, exploring some deeper and more lasting ideas and practices that will help us, as Alice Walker puts it, "to survive in human fashion".

21soul is not a self-help programme in the way that we usually know it. It makes no promise of happiness or riches - rather it questions the very basis of our understanding of being rich and happy in our culture!

Nor does 21soul claim, as many programmes do, that individual spiritual development is the key to happiness and fulfilment. Spirit is a part of the wider human experience, but only one part - and not always the most important.

This will be a deep and grounded learning experience. It is focused on you finding the best way of living and making a difference in the world from a perspective of your highest possible manifestations of self.

Why might you come to 21soul?

First - you come with an awareness of a dissolving world and you may feel anger and despair! You want to make sense of this and to know your emotional response is valid, not simply an internal psychological 'problem'!

Second - you come with confusion or scepticism about the stories our culture tells us about economics, ecology, creativity and happiness. Your intuition tells you something very different. You want a space in which to tell new tales of imagination, hope and joy.

Third - you come with idealism and want to respond to this crisis - as an activist, artist or healer - with energy and creativity. You want to rejuvenate and develop some skills and resilience before going back into the fray!

Fourth - you feel worn out by the crisis, and need nurturing and healing. Strength, joy and self compassion are all practices you would like to develop, and you'd like some guidance on finding a less difficult path in the future.

21soul...

..is a fresh and radical psychological community: a place to question cultural assumptions and develop life practices for troubled times; a forum for deep conversations; a space to make change.

..is the deep work we need to do to re-find soul, reconnect with our ecology of mind and redefine relationships.

..is for soul activists, soul leaders, soul artists and soul makers who want to explore ways - individually and collectively - of living, loving, working and creating the world of our futures.

..is for people who want to live with depth, grit, grace and spirit, and make a real difference in their work, art and life.

how the 21soul e-course is structured

The course

The course provides an introduction to the ideas and practices of 'unpsychology' and 21soul. It is intended to be used flexibly and comprises nine basic lessons or modules, plus a tenth review module. Further details on the course content are on the next page.

The modules are as follows:

Module 1a - Introduction, rationale and the three-fold self

Module 1b - The dimensions of soul-making

Module 2 - A poetic constellation of the self

Module 3 - The deep practices of soul-making

Module 4a - Five lives of soul and shadow

Module 4b - Growing the acorn - character and calling

Module 5 - The realities of existence

Module 6 - Experience and the constellation of the self

Module 7 - Connection, love and ecology of mind

Module 8 - The creative soul emerging

Module 9 - Bringing it together - self and practice into action

Module 10 - Special review pack and planning next steps

At the end of each module, if you choose, you can discuss the ideas, questions and practices with me in a one-to-one coaching session or join with others on a special twentyonesoul micromobs forum. The questions, activities and course notes are designed to be used flexibly, and can be used as a prompt for group discussion in organisations and learning communities.

The modules

Each module includes a mixture of theory and practice. However, as a guide, the first three modules cover the basic theory and models of 21soul and Unpsychology. Modules 4 to 8 are more practice oriented, each containing a number of strands that are woven through with:

1. practices and reflections relating to the social self, soul self and ecological self.
2. references to themes of adult development (growing up) and soul-making (growing down).
3. aspects of shadow work, active imagination and creative development.

A special review pack will be sent at the beginning of your tenth month, full of activities to help you to evaluate where you have got to in your soul journey, and plan your next steps.

Pacing and support

You can undertake the course in your own time, but once you have signed up, you will be sent a link to download each course pack each month. If you want to do it more quickly (or slowly) you can change the pace at any time.

The course is also accompanied by an e-book, entitled 'Back to Life: Soul Manifestos and Pieces of Joy', containing further reflections on the ideas in the course. An copy of this book is provided FREE to all those who sign up for the course. There's more information on this below.

One-to-one soul coaching is also available to support the course. One 50 minute phone or Skype session is included with your purchase of the course, but you can add further sessions as you want, at any time. Purchasing a block of coaching sessions at the time you register for the course will give you a good discount! Sessions are most likely to be via phone or Skype, but if you want to meet face-to-face, this can be arranged - subject to cost and geography!

the 21soul modules

Modules 1-3 are about the basic ideas and models that provide the foundation for soul-making and soul activism:

Module 1a - Introduction, rationale and the three-fold self: Modern psychology is a reflection of our narrow, shallow culture. In this module you'll learn how we are socialised and 'narrowed down' to the social realm of self - and how this leads to distress and unhappiness. You'll learn about the three-fold self - and experience this broader version of 'you' in the world. Finally you'll be invited to explore creative aspects of the three selves, responding deeply and imaginatively to these and to begin your soul-making journey, Module 1b - The dimensions of soul-making: In this supplementary material you'll be provided with the basic model of 21soul - the dimensions of soul-making: up, down, across and through. You'll learn about Rob MacNamara's Elegant Self and see how this higher developmental level is essential for us to reach if we are to be soul activists and leaders. We'll briefly look at other models of integration, including Ken Wilber's Integral Practice, and explore what can be drawn from this.

Module 2 - A poetic constellation of the self: This module explores metaphorical, imaginative and poetic constellations of self and soul. At the heart of this module is a story of a little girl called Sarah and her 'spirit guide', who tells her about the soul 'three times round'. Engaging with your own stories and creative responses builds on the centrality of story, metaphor and poetic image in soul-making. This is where you start to think about how your soul and ecological self start to play out in the world.

Module 3 - The deep practices of soul-making: James Hillman's radical idea of the energy of our original image - the 'acorn' - is at the heart of this module, and you will be invited to apply this to your own life to get a sense of your 'calling'. An essential aspect of Hillman's ideas is that he locates soul (and shadow) out in the world, not just within and between individuals. In the exercises you'll explore these themes deeply, working on 'practical moves' - ways in which your soul is active in the ecological, political and wider spheres.

Modules 4-8 are based on life practices that emerge from the first three modules. These are the 'five lives of soul and shadow'. Finally, module 9 pulls it all together!

Module 4a - Five lives of soul and shadow: In this supplementary material you'll be provided with a brief introduction to the five tools for twenty-first century soul-building and how these weave across our development and practice.

Module 4b - Growing the acorn - character and calling: Exploring the seeds of your calling and character, you'll get a different sense of your history and begin to open yourself beyond habits and stories you've told yourself about personality, joy and pain.

Module 5 - The realities of existence: Facing world, self and existence is the prerequisite to soulful activism. Here you'll be invited to explore ecological, personal and community themes in relation to the existential 'human givens' and to experience 'what is'.

Module 6 - Experience and the constellation of the self: In this subjective realm of sense, emotion and physicality, you'll explore how memory, dreams and phenomenology all contribute to the constellation of self - and the changing stories we tell of ourselves and the world.

Module 7 - Connection, love and ecology of mind: Connections are not only forged in the social realm, but in the wider 'everythingness' of the ecological self. You'll explore how deep connections are vital to wellbeing and our ability to sustain activism and imagination.

Module 8 - The creative soul emerging: Throughout this course you'll be encouraged to make creative responses to the material. In this module, however, you'll explicitly explore the source and nature of your creative self - and how this might emerge into the future.

Module 9 - Bringing it together - self and practice into action: Asking: 'what does this all add up to?', you'll bring the strands together and revisit the integral framework in order to access a deeper version of 'you' and 'us' we'll need to tackle the challenges facing us humans.

Module 10 - Special review pack and planning next steps: A special review pack, full of activities to help you to evaluate where you have got to in your soul journey, and plan your next steps. Possibly the biggest action plan you'll have ever made!

the three-fold self

(This is an edited extract from the first module of the 21soul e-course)

Let's say for the sake of simplicity that human beings – all of us, throughout our history – are born to operate in the realms of three selves.

The first, the fundamental soul self, contains all our deepest, most authentic talents, virtues and destinies: “in each of us, there is a little voice that knows exactly which way to go”, writes Alice Walker.

This is soul: the dynamic essence of each of us. It is called different things in different traditions – soul, inheritance, core self, true self, strengths and virtues, calling, temperament, character, daemon - but can be seen as a combination of all these.

Soul is not a singular self but connected – through metaphor and poetic image, by evolution and archetype, beneath the surface of our lives and waking awareness - to all other souls.

Soul can be a problematic idea for some, but if we are to reclaim some human sense of agency in the world, it must come from this realm.

It may sometimes seem a hopeless task, but to have a sense that we are an individual who matters, whilst recognising the fundamental insignificance of each of us, and having a sense of our deep connections with each other and our planet, we have to explore the intangible, mysterious realm of the soul.

The second is the social self. This is the self of learned behaviour, cultural belonging, relationship and interpersonal habits. It is in how we are seen by others, how we respond to others, how we learn to love. It is embedded in the psychological theories of development, attachment and object relations and the assumptions we make about parenting and the determinism of nurture. This is the self that in the contemporary world dominates consciousness, human motivation and behaviour. For better or worse, for richer or poorer, the social, relational self is the one marriage we recognise!

Third, and least acknowledged by modern humanity (but inherent to the 'self' of indigenous peoples) is the ecological self. This emerges from the material world on which we evolved – we animals. It exists in the context of phenomena such as night and day, dark and night, body and mind, hill and forest, sea and land, big sky and deep waters.

This 'self' is really not a self at all. It is a constellation of ever-changing experiences of life on a shape-shifting earth. It is the sense of presence and connection that dissolves the boundaries between humans and our environment, and puts our small human concerns in perspective. In a way, the ecological self is a self of everythingness – though more gritty and grounded than transcendent.

Each human culture has had a own dynamic balance between these three realms, and something is lost if a culture becomes blind to any of these dimensions. Our own civilisation – and the psychology that has developed to explain its mind – is fixated with the social self to the extent that the other two – the soul self and ecology of mind – hardly get a look in. This might explain why we got into the mess we are in, and why we still find it so hard to create the solutions that may, even at this late stage, be possible.

We have a one-track mindset, so to speak; obsessed with the social aspects of human being; finding it almost impossible to locate and access these other two dimensions in meaningful or sustainable ways. As a result, most people believe that they are unhappy because they cannot get their life 'right' in this narrow realm of the social self.

Distress emerges because we live our lives too narrowly; attenuating the richness of soul, connection and ecology into a yearning for self development, recognition and relationship; wishing for something – perfect love – that can never be fully realised.

what people say about 21soul

*"It looks exciting, intriguing, challenging, comprehensive, practical and thought through!"
"...it's a cracking good course and much needed in these turbulent times!" (DS)*

..."really like the ambition of the course in fostering the growth of 'soul activists' for the 21st century, and the challenge to narrow models of social / psychological functioning" (CL)

"it is a sort of personal and community development process, as I see it, definitely an unpsychology, something that reaches into people's lives gently and aids them broaden their perspectives and think more soulfully and act more bravely and ecologically" (AL)

"I found this (the coaching) very helpful and the touch of 1-1 contact in a group experience has made it more powerful for me" (EW)

"..exquisite"... "very inspiring" (MS).

events & coaching

Workshops and day courses

Over the next twelve months - during 2014 - there will be number of 21soul events and workshops:

Kitchen Table workshops

These small group sessions go deep into a number of wellbeing and soul-making issues. They will be held at our lovely converted barn in Pembrokeshire - the Granary.

There will be sessions on creativity, and activism an introduction to twenty first century soul making, deep wellbeing and poetry in the wild.

Full details will be released soon, but do get in touch if you're interested in attending. There's be great conversation, a good lunch and cutting-edge learning on offer!

For information on these workshops, go to: www.21soul.co.uk and click on events.

Unpsychology Gathering 2014

In the summer of 2014 I'm hoping to organise the first 21soul Unpsychology gathering.

This is in the early stages of planning at the moment, but the event is likely to take place during August 2014. There will be workshops, practice sessions and opportunities to share ideas and perspectives in beautiful Pembrokeshire. It is linked to work undertaken by members of the Dark Mountain Project, but will include contributions and voices from across the alternative psychology community,

This will be the first opportunity to build an unpsychology movement that can begin to challenge to cultural and therapeutic myths and assumptions that internalise distress and ensures that the force of psychology is seen as something inside and between people. The real truth is that, as James Hillman said: "the sickness is out there!"

Mark August 2014 in your diary - and get on the 21soul mailing list to get further details as soon as they're released!

Coaching and soul making

21soul is all about supporting the development of people who want and need to make a difference in their life and work in these turbulent times.

Steve Thorp trained as a counsellor and psychotherapist and has worked with hundreds of people over eighteen years, helping them with healing, development and soul-making. Now he works as an independent integral therapist and consultant, rather than identifying with the 'official' registered psychotherapy community.

Soul conversations are deep and challenging opportunities to explore soul in the world and in your self. Sessions can take place face-to-face, by phone or Skype (depending on geography!). Steve's approach is engaging, challenging, gentle, deep and supportive.

you'll be encouraged to explore new stories and frameworks for the development of your 'three-fold' self - which will help you be more creative and sustain yourself more fully in your work in the world.

conversations that catch fire!

Distinctive and soulful workshops, coaching and development opportunities: 21soul is a psychological community that understands that soul is in the world, not just inside us. It is about preparing people to be active, engaged and creative artists for change.

To find out more about soul conversations, go to www.21soul.co.uk and click on conversations.

back to life e-book

Twenty-first century soul

Everything we humans do, say and mean is psychological. Psyche is not just of mind, but of body and world too. All experience passes through psyche - colouring each moment, each sense, each occurrence. Psyche frames objectivity through inevitable subjectivity; and no matter how much we try to explain and prove or strive for sanity, an unpredictable riot of experience floods through.

We cannot push it away. It does it depend on permission, proof or social convention. This force, we call soul. Soul bubbles up in everything we do. Deny it and it comes back in archetypal forms to enact violence and hatred.

Accept it too literally and it becomes fixed in dogmas and theories that we enthusiastically, yet hopelessly, wrap around the human experience. It does not matter whether we accept it or not, soul will have its way one way or another, pushing a way into our lives somehow and some day. Throughout our life, this 'something' we experience as soul guides us as a force and direction.

And yet our civilisation has lost its soul. If the fractured, cultural world of humans has a personality, it is that of a searcher no longer willing to search and strive.

Nowadays destinations must be reached, secrets known, goals achieved – and quickly. Everyone must be happy and fulfilled, reach dizzy heights and reach them now. Ambiguity, a life's work, a lasting marriage, a civilisation that has long-term vision and imagination, a planet that can sustain its life-forms – none of these long, slow virtues seem acceptable or comprehensible to many of us.

The modern soul also gets sicker with each tragedy we witness through our hi-definition screens. Each new star that rises in this fickle, cultural firmament is brutally extinguished. In the way of a gladiatorial contest we put our thumbs down to imagination. We condemn our souls to death, yet still yearn for wonder and transcendence. We look for these in the wrong places and soul remains largely unconscious and unacknowledged, though only because we choose this to be so. In reality, soul is as close to us as the grass beneath our feet and a great deal more accessible than the fame, riches, self-fulfilment, personal growth and happiness we wish for.

A soulful approach to our fractured world demands that we recognise, and learn to love, our fractured souls. No other way to healing is possible or necessary.

An extract from:

Back to Life - Soul manifestos and Pieces of Joy
This is an e-book by Steve Thorp (2013) consisting of a series of reflections, meditations and small manifestos that explore the psychology and life practices we need to live with in troubled times.

Back to Life

soul manifestos
& pieces of joy

by Steve Thorp

fees & contact

21soul 2014 - here's what you get:

- * A monthly course pack – nine in all – sent to you, each of which includes all course materials, audio seminars, activities, reverences, meditative reflections and follow up reading.
- * A special review pack sent at the beginning of your tenth month, full of activities to help you to evaluate where you have got to in your soul journey, and plan your next steps.
- * One FREE coaching session – to be taken up whenever you like during the course – and the opportunity to purchase additional sessions at a discounted rate.
- * Full online support from myself, Steve Thorp, as course leader. You can email me at any time during the year to ask questions, clarify direction and get feedback on your coursework, activities and activism.
- * Membership of the 21soul online forum – where you can share perspectives and creative responses, and have deep soul conversations with other members of the 21soul community.
- * Special exclusive supplementary materials – during the year, I'll be developing additional materials just for the 21soul group, and there'll be optional modules offered free of charge by guest facilitators.
- * Heavy discounts on events – If you sign up for 21soul, you'll be offered a discount on events like the 2014 21soul summer school and any workshops and courses run during the year.
- * Free e-books during the year, and big discounts on print versions when they are published.

Contact me NOW to join the programme!. You'll be sent a link to your first lesson pack by email immediately!

Steve Thorp email: steve@21soul.co.uk
phone: 07949553029 web: www.21soul.co.uk

2014 price - £30 a month for 10 months

To join the 2014 programme, you pay just £30 a month* for 10 months and you get all the above. THAT'S ALL! There are no add-ons, except additional coaching sessions at a 'mate's rate' of £50 a session if you want them*. To join 21soul NOW, or if you have any queries, contact me for a discussion at: steve@21soul.co.uk or ring 07949553029.

Note: the total cost of programme inclusive of all elements above is £300 to be paid over 10 months. This is a saving of £195 over the full version of the programme advertised last year – and £95 cheaper than the previous introductory offer. Why? Because I want to grow the 21soul community and help as many people as possible with their soul building and soul activism!*

Soul conversations and coaching

Soul coaching and conversations can be booked to support your work on the 21soul e-course, or you can undertake deep coaching or counselling work to support your own development, wellbeing and relationships. You can work face-to-face, by phone or by Skype.

Steve Thorp writes: "These days, I tend to work with people who want to explore their higher potential, develop their creativity and face their shadows! This is not easy work but deeply fulfilling - and my intention is that you will find that these soul conversations help you align with your calling, imaginations, artistry and activism. Then it's up to you...!"

2014 coaching fees for 21soul members are at the reduced rate of £50 per hour session - by phone, Skype or face-to-face.

to the soul

*Your gift is welcome to me;
your continuity is true, from one scene to the next.*

My life is spent following the thread through the dark passageways until the day is visible ahead,

a growing light-ball, and the thread discarded as I reach the surface and emerge into the world, watched from above by the circling buzzard.

*The film of my life,
the drama with an audience of one, is scripted by you.*

Did you write a part for yourself, or will you always trust me to intepret your works?

Steve Thorp email: steve@21soul.co.uk
phone: 07949553029 web: www.21soul.co.uk